

Link: <https://www.thisismoney.co.uk/wires/reuters/article-8237953/Package-petrol-bullet-Italian-bank-branch.html>

How we can help | Contact us Like 16.5M

Wednesday, Apr 22nd 2020 7AM 16°C 10AM 16°C 5-Day Forecast

Money Home | Markets | Saving & banking | Investing | Bills | Cars | Holidays | Cards & loans | Pensions | Mortgages | Experts | Buy-to-let Login

Package with petrol and bullet found in Italian bank branch

By REUTERS
PUBLISHED: 18:36 BST, 20 April 2020 | UPDATED: 18:36 BST, 20 April 2020

MILAN, April 20 (Reuters) - A package containing a petrol tank and a bullet was found inside a Sardinian branch of Italian bank Intesa Sanpaolo on Monday, police said, an incident that a leading union linked to tensions over business requests for COVID-19 crisis loans.

"The parcel did not have a fuse and couldn't have detonated but it was a clear threat against the bank," local police commander Pietro Barrel told Reuters.

The main trade union for banking staff, FABI, linked the incident to tensions between customers and bank workers over requests for loans guaranteed by the state under a liquidity package the government approved earlier this month.

Police said all possibilities were being considered and it was too early to say if the episode was connected to the coronavirus emergency.

Monday was the first day on which Italian businesses could apply for loans worth up to 25,000 euros ($27,000) which carry a 100% state guarantee.

FABI said there had been "waves" of requests from businesses for such loans.

"There have been numerous moments of tension between customers asking for liquidity and bank staff," FABI said, adding the package in the Intesa branch was among the most concerning examples of the unrest.

A spokesman for Intesa, Italy's largest retail bank, confirmed a parcel had been found, adding that the branch would open as usual on Tuesday.

Italian banks, which have shuttered branches and cut opening hours to limit contagion risks for their staff, have been tasked by the government with funnelling to cash-starved firms up to 750 billion euros in possible new loans guaranteed by the state.

Italy's third-largest bank Banco BPM, the first lender to report figures, said there had been 8,000 requests for loans of up to 25,000 euros on Monday, totalling 140 million euros in aggregate.

($1 = 0.9206 euros)

(Reporting by Valentina Za; Additional reporting by Andrea Mandala; Editing by Pravin Char)

Share or comment on this article: Package with petrol and bullet found in Italian bank...

FTSE 100 5,641.03 -171.80 ▼
POUND USD $1.2277 ▼
EUR €1.1320 ▼

I want to find... ▼

Search 🔍

All articles Share prices

QUICK WAYS TO SAVE MONEY

- Credit cards
- Life insurance
- Savings accounts
- Best mortgages
- Cut your energy bills
- Current accounts
- Cheapest loans
- £12.50 share dealing

ADVERTISEMENT

DON'T MISS

Will my final salary pension be affected by the coronavirus crisis? Steve Webb replies.

Leading estate agent calls for a stamp duty cut to revive the property market and prevent a collapse after lockdown Knight Frank.

House prices data is meaningless says Rightmove as the number of homes put up for sale collapses in lockdown... - and leading agent calls for a stamp duty cut.

Here's a golden dozen of investment trusts trading at a discount